

UNIVERSITY OF ALBERTA

Welcome to the University of Alberta— a leader in teaching, research and community service.

The University of Alberta has numerous success stories of which we can be proud. We continue to lead the country in the number of 3M Teaching Fellowships, the gold medal for excellence in university undergraduate teaching. Our faculties are innovative and dynamic, creating the optimal learning environment for students to ensure that each student develops to his or her full potential.

In research, each day important discoveries are made, resulting in exceptional breakthroughs such the Edmonton Protocol—a major breakthrough in the treatment of Type 1 Diabetes. Our university also leads the country with six NSERC (Natural Sciences and Energy Research Council of Canada) Steacie Fellowships—one of Canada's premier science and engineering prizes.

In community service, last year, University of Alberta staff and students volunteered 38,503 hours or 4.4 years to aid a variety of charitable organizations. We continue to serve our community in exemplary ways committed to impacting individual lives everyday.

During your studies, you will hone the skills you need to compete with the best in the world: critical thinking, independent judgment, teamwork and an understanding of how you learn as you prepare to be our leaders of tomorrow.

On behalf of the University of Alberta, I wish you all the best in your academic pursuits.

Sincerely,

Roderick D Fraser, PhD
President

The University of Alberta is a publicly supported, nondenominational, coeducational institution. It is authorized to grant undergraduate and graduate degrees, certificates and diplomas under the provisions of the Universities Act of the Province of Alberta, the Revised Statutes of Alberta, 1980, Chapter U-5 with amendments in force as of February 11, 1999. The University was established under the University Act (Alberta, 1906), and is a member of the Association of Universities and Colleges of Canada and the Association of Commonwealth Universities.

International Students: Sharing and Learning

Currently, international students attending the U of A come from 130 countries. These students are "living resources" on-campus—they help increase our understanding of global issues while contributing to the University community through sharing ideas and perspectives. One sharing vehicle is "Bridges: Student Speakers for Global Awareness," a speakers bureau consisting of students (international students and Canadian students with international experience) who make regional and topical presentations by drawing on their personal experiences. Canadian students also get the opportunity to be matched with the incoming students through the "Peer Leader program," helping them to adjust to life in Canada and organizing social and recreational activities.

Transitions: International Student Orientation

The International Centre works with international students through their transition process with a reception service, the International Student Handbook (available online) and an annual three-day orientation program. The goals of the comprehensive orientation include answering concerns, getting to know other people on campus and beginning the process of community building.

Study Abroad!

The U of A has exchanges with institutions in more than 50 countries. Student exchanges offer opportunities to experience a different culture first-hand, often while working toward a degree at the U of A. Exchange students pay fees and tuition to the U of A and can, in many cases, receive credit for course work at the host university. Attend one of the regularly-scheduled information sessions to discover how you can go abroad.

Have an International Education

The Directory of Resources for a Global Education at the U of A helps students create their own international education program, with a focus on the developing South and human rights. The Directory available online is a compilation of the U of A's resources with a global focus, including courses, faculty and student groups.

International Week: Celebrate!

International Week, the largest annual on-campus extracurricular event, features presentations, fairs and displays, and explores local and international perspectives on global issues. International Week is held during the second term.

International Student Groups

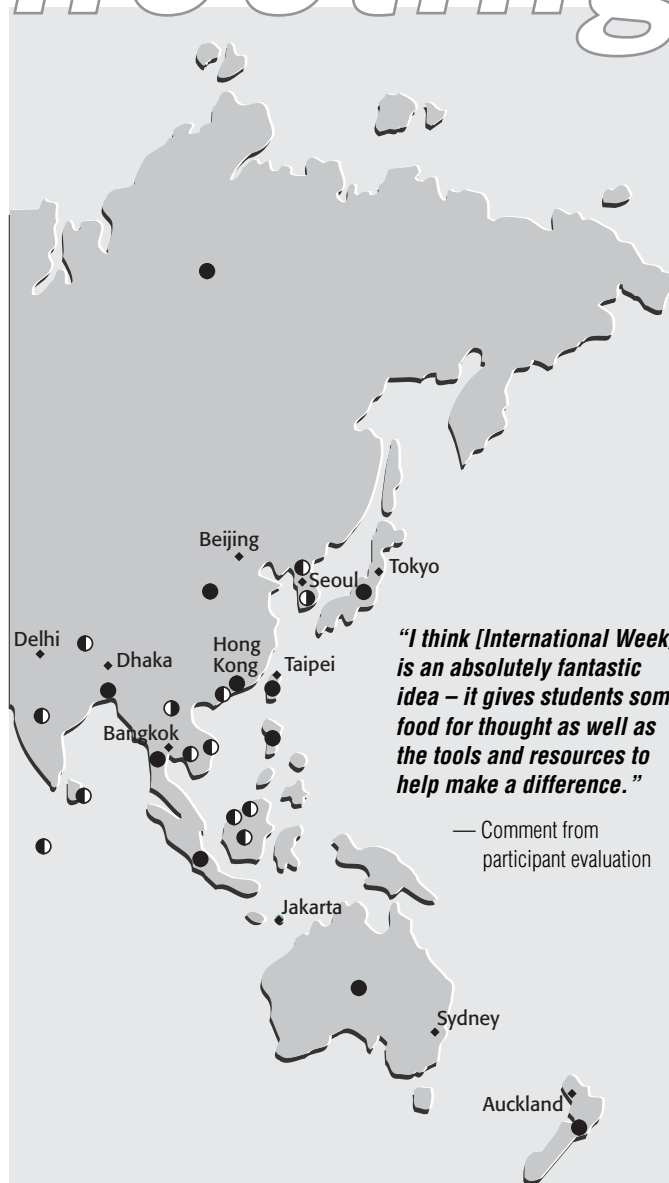

There are numerous student groups on campus that have ethnocultural or issue-specific foci. Check at the International Centre or contact the Students' Union, Student Groups, 040V SUB, phone (780) 492-9789 for information.

The U of A in Cooperation with Other Countries

The U of A works with educational institutions, industry and government in many countries in the world. Partnerships take the form of research linkages, exchanges and professional and community development. Academic divisions focusing on international studies include Canadian Centre for Austrian and Central European Studies, Canadian Circumpolar Institute, Canadian Institute for Nordic Studies, Canadian Institute of Ukrainian Studies, Centre for International Business Studies, Centre for International Education and Development, East Asian Studies, Faculty of Extension English Language Program, Modern Languages and Comparative Studies, and Research Institute for Comparative Literature.

Finding Out More...

Information on the University's international programs, services and activities is available on-line at www.international.ualberta.ca or through e-mail at international@ualberta.ca. The International Centre (international student services and programs, student exchanges, and global education) is located at 172 HUB International, sidewalk level 9101 of HUB Mall. The International Programs and International Relations Offices are located at 1204 College Plaza (8215-112 Street).

"I think [International Week] is an absolutely fantastic idea – it gives students some food for thought as well as the tools and resources to help make a difference."

— Comment from participant evaluation

"There is value in interacting with people from different countries, different educational systems and different cultures."

— Alumnus from Tanzania

with the world

“Students at the University of Alberta are encouraged to participate in international opportunities – whether they take place on campus or abroad. Take the challenge – learn about the world!”

— Dr. Brian Stevenson, Associate Vice-President (International), University of Alberta
